

The RMIT Pathway

About RMIT

RMIT was founded in 1887 as a technical college with the objective of making education available to the working people in Melbourne. Since then, RMIT has grown to become a global university of technology, design and enterprise, offering a wide range of undergraduate and postgraduate degrees and vocational programmes.

RMIT honours its origins through its commitment to education, research, industry partnership and community needs.

RMIT has three campuses in Melbourne, two campuses in Vietnam and a research centre in Barcelona. It also has partnerships with universities in Singapore, Hong Kong, Mainland China, India and Indonesia.
