University of Auckland Medical School

Kings is partnered with the number one university in New Zealand, the University of Auckland, to offer a guaranteed pathway to Health Sciences and Biomedical Science, which can then lead to Medicine.

The Faculty of Medical and Health Sciences is New Zealand's largest provider of medical and biomedical research.

The faculty was established in 1968 as the University of Auckland School of Medicine. Traditionally known for its training of doctors, the faculty now offers a full range of health and biomedical science programmes at undergraduate level. Students will have the opportunity to transfer into Medicine after completion of their first year of Bachelor of Health Sciences or Bachelor of Science (Biomedical Science).
